

Secretariat's Meadow

On March 30, 1970, Secretariat drew his first breath in a little white foaling shed on a historic farm called The Meadow in Caroline County, Virginia. Three years later he would leave the nation breathless as he captured the Triple Crown, shattering records and rivals alike. At The Meadow, America's Super Horse learned to gallop across its rolling fields and its loamy track. There, Secretariat first felt the calming hand of a groom, the taste of a bit in his mouth and the weight of a rider on his back. At The Meadow, the foundation was laid for a legend. Though much has been written about his spectacular racing career, the complete story of Secretariat's birthplace and the Chenery family who raised and raced him has never been told...until now. And a Chenery granddaughter is telling it. Secretariat's Meadow: The Land, The Family, The Legend reveals an intimate picture of this storied place from the viewpoint of Kate Chenery Tweedy, daughter of Penny Chenery (Tweedy) and granddaughter of Meadow Stable's founder Christopher T. Chenery. Co-authored with LeeAnne Meadows Ladin, the book tells not only Secretariat's story, but the story of an enduring piece of land where an empire built on broodmares eventually produced an immortal son.

On March 30, 1970, Secretariat drew his first breath in a little white foaling shed on a historic farm called The Meadow in Caroline County, Virginia. Three years later, his track earnings would turn the tide of the faltering Meadow Stable and enable it to launch its greatest champion, Secretariat. Though he would be swept up in the fame of the American Pharoah era, Secretariat's story is still being told. Tours are conducted by LeeAnne Meadows Ladin, Secretariat tourism manager and award-winning co-author of the best-selling Secretariat's Meadow.
